Mobility in food cultures from ancient history to contemporary times

The topic

The history of food and food cultures represents a prism to understand, investigate and compare the collective identities of societies of both in ancient and contemporary times. However, how do food practices develop? Are they volatile or fixed across centuries? How do food cultures circulate and how do they influence each other? Finally, how do institutions confront the problems related to the necessities of the societies they operate for?

To answer these and further questions, the International Winter School Entangled food histories. Mobility in food cultures from ancient history to contemporary times (12 -16 December at the University of Pavia; 21 December online) aims at investigating the concept of mobility both in a practical and symbolic sense and to consider different spatial and temporal contexts, from the ancient to the contemporary world.
